Orange County Archives in Action

ORANGE COUNTY, Ca. – The first annual Orange County Archives in Action: A Regional Archives Bazaar will be held on Saturday, November 3, 2018 at the Bowers Museum in Santa Ana. This free, public event will showcase the history and cultural heritage of Orange County.

Organized by a committee representing Orange County special collections, archives, and library communities, Orange County Archives in Action seeks to highlight the known and unknown stories of the region. The daylong event will bring cultural heritage institutions together to exhibit collections, share stories, and answer questions about Orange County history. In addition to exhibitors, the bazaar will feature presentations by several Orange County scholars dedicated to preserving and increasing awareness and access to primary sources documenting the county's diverse past.

The goal of Orange County Archives in Action is to raise the profile of county history to the public-at-large, as well as academics and independent researchers.
